

COLUMBIA VICTORIOUS.

PRINCETON TIGERS VANQUISHED IN AN EXCITING BATTLE.

Final Score 6 to 5, the Jersey men losing the extra point from the Goal Kick because of a Blunder-Sanford's Men Play Great Football in the First Half and Finish with a Fine Race-Princeton's Eleven Inferior to those of Recent Years—Rules Favorably Broken by the Tigers' Coaches—Local Collegians Have a Big Celebration—Thousands See the Struggle on Columbia Field.

Columbia's varsity football eleven, after one of the hardest battles of the season, vanquished the Princeton Tigers at Columbia Field yesterday afternoon in the presence of one of the biggest crowds seen here in years by a score of 6 to 5. But for a lucky play on the part of Berrier, the Princeton end in the second half, the Tigers would have been banished from the field by the hands of full back Berrier, as the latter was being thrown at mid-field, and with scarcely any opposition he sprinted to the Blue and White goal line for a touchdown that was an important game. When the ball was brought out for a goal kick it was placed upon the ground before Mills was ready to kick it, and because of that Princeton lost a chance to make the extra point, which would have tied the score. As it was, Princeton now played during the entire game, and Columbia showed better stamina and recuperative powers. For when the game ended in the twilight Sanford's men were engaged in a final desperate assault upon Princeton's line and were making plenty of ground.

Columbia scored a touchdown in the first half in the twenty-fourth minute of the football. There was no kick about it. The back field worked with beautiful precision, the interference was good and the gains were made chiefly at the tackles and ends. Most of Columbia's largest gains were made through Capt. Pell, who was a mark all the way through the game. He showed a fine sense of direction and attack during the first half Columbia was far superior to Princeton that the out-timers who came to the field loaded down with orange and black tags and yellow eyeshades could not believe that the young men with striped stockings and jerseys on represented the Blue and White. They were not only named by many to be one of the weakest teams that has ever represented the Jersey college, but that does not detract in any way from Columbia's victory. Sanford's men played better football than they did against Yale. They looked better, although they were not so well drilled. They seemed about to go to pieces. But they stood up manfully to the desperate assaults of the Tigers and on several occasions when the victors had worked the ball dangerously near the goal line there was a valiant brace and Princeton lost the oval.

It was not until the second half that Princeton showed any like effective attack. Then with a sort of tackle back formation and concerted action on the part of the guards backs were opened up in the right wing of Columbia's line so that the backs made some big gains. But when they got within striking distance of the goal, the Princeton players kicked goals from the field were made. This showed the desperation of Princeton's fight for the Tigers knew full well that Columbia's rush line had proved stronger than their own in almost every respect. The only point in which Princeton excelled during the first half was in the kicking of the backs. They were very difficult to handle and were well placed, but as far as distance went he did not have much of an advantage over Morley.

BOTH SIDES VIOLATE THE FOOTBALL RULES. The Columbia eleven played fast, aggressive, and in some instances illegal football. Smythe persisted in holding his opponent in many of the plays, and because of his offenses Columbia lost much territory and the ball. Princeton defended just as manfully. In fact there were many cases of foul interference and deliberate fouling which the very competent officials seldom failed to penalize. The officials, by the way, had a rather serious time with the Princeton coaches. The rule which requires the side line to be cleared of spectators was broken by five men Princeton violated flagrantly, and when referee Whiting of Cornell decided that Princeton's goal line had been cleared the ball had been placed upon the ground too soon, coaches Edwards, Haller and Moffat of Princeton promptly indicated to each other that they would not allow their players to be ejected. They formed a line upon their university. They scored before Whiting so openly that for a few moments he was inclined to resign his position, but cooler heads smoothed the trouble over and the game went on. Princeton also broke the coaching rules in the manner as at New Haven. The Princeton men were seen to be talking to the Princeton men to stop. This practice, and also once time there was a twenty-five yard rule along the side lines on Princeton's portion of the field and most of them were coaches, trainers and advisers. Columbia observed the rules with much more strictness and decorum.

COLUMBIA TRIES A NEW FORMATION.

The Columbia eleven played through the game with but a single change, though Yale with her tremendous line blocking succeeded in knocking Sanford out of action after another foul play. The ball was kicked to the Princeton line and the latter was not so destructive. Princeton's end runs were useless. The interference was ragged, slow and easily broken up. The defensive strength of the rush line was so weak that the Columbia forwards had no trouble in handling their opponents at every stage, except when the Tigers brought into use several new plays. Columbia's ground gaining was systematic and showed the scientific coaching of Sanford. There were few big runs around the ends, but the Columbia backs, together with Jack Wright, the end who kicked the goal, showed a fine sense of direction and attack during the first half. The Princeton line was not so well drilled as the Columbia line, and the latter was not so well placed, but as far as distance went he did not have much of an advantage over Morley.

MANY STABS ON COLUMBIA TEAM.

While at the Columbia men played a dash game, still there were several who were stars. Morley, who was not so well drilled as the Princeton players, made the touchdown which helped to win the game. He was constantly knocked out of time and at one stage it was thought that he would have recovered the ball and Morley made a dash for the goal. He was not so well drilled as the Princeton players, made the touchdown which helped to win the game. He was constantly knocked out of time and
